

DIEGO:

Diego was rescued by 2 amazing women who were just traveling around Colombia. They were walking around the old historic city called Centro, when they came across a young male dog who was shaking and in fear.

His fur was covered in mange and he had been attacked by other dogs because he had many wounds around his body, especially his face and ears. These women were proactive and got Diego to our vet. He was tested and found to be Heartworm positive. After a very intense treatment of injectables, and crate rest, Diego completed his recovery.

He has been waiting at the vet now for months. Since international flights to Colombia are still cancelled there has been no chance for anyone to fly down and get him and/or fly him out. Diego will be adopted by his rescuers, and they are dying to reunite with him. They have sponsored all of his care since the day they rescued him and are coming to Miami to pick him up! He is a happy, healthy boy who is ready to join his new family!
